The Wright brothers performed yesterday-really performed. They are out of Ovelton Sanderson Steps Into Deep the hand, showed themselves to be thoroughly broken, and did everything but sit up and beg. And like the old, old story which was told first when time itself was cutting its teeth, the ringmaster was a ringmistress.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, nee Miss Alice Roosevelt, went out to Fort Myer to look things over with Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts. They came very comfortably over the dusty parade ground in a smart electric runabout.

The fact that the rope about the aerotance between the aviators and the rest big sewer. of humanity was a trifle less than elsewhere, and inquired when a flight would be made. One of the stock answers was handed back across the rope: 'Just as soon as the wind goes down.'

Went Back to Wait.

Mrs. Longworth and Mr. Gardner went H. Moran, of 1519 K street southeast, back to the electric to wait and to ponder on the peculiarities of some persons. Presently the daughter of the only living told the gentleman from Massachusetts grounds near his home. to step around to the back and have one of the army men ask the Wright brothers if she might not have more of a look-in.

The summons was effective. Pretty the mouth of the sewer. soon-very soon-for one of the Wright Wilbur, appeared around the corner of the aeropiane shed in tow of the representative of Mrs. Longworth. For the first time since he arrived in not be omitted that Wilbur has divorced the old black derby and taken up with a very sassy little headplece, every bit as sassy as Orville's; also he was looking monly chipper, with a wing collar tickling his chin, an honorable necktie wrapped around it, and first-class cuffs sticking out of his sleeves.

But in that brief moment Wilbur doubted. He fumbled. He stretched this part of his raiment, took a surreptitious pluck at that, and pecked slyly at something else. Suddenly, like an official test smile creased his aquiline face. Just as abruptly it vanished. And so he was led up to Mrs. Longworth, nee Miss Alice
